COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is structured for students who have not previous experience in drawing. The course is based on three principle elements: the human body (proportions, movement, details), nature drawing, still life (composition, references in measurement), and the capacity to develop a visual language by means of one's personal imagination and creativity.

Fundamental concepts and methods of drawing will be of interest a series of complementary exercises will be utilized to direct students towards and approach to drawing that hopes to challenge and inspired the students to undertake serious considerations about their understanding of the visual of the world.

The program will discuss the fundamental elements of drawing such a proportion, methods of measurement, and composition. A live model will be present in the studio to allow for practical studies to take place after the subject matter for the day has been introduced. Studies of the full body and sections of anatomy such as the head, hands, feet, will be and integral part of our exploration of the visual.

The course-projects embraces a variety of different types of drawing procedures: quick gestures, long pose drawing, sketches, studies, full compositional drawings. Some projects will suggest an unusual manner of working(use of the opposite hand, blind-contour drawing, tactile drawing. For this particular types of exercises the goal is not to produce a "beautiful drawing", but rather to introduce the students to new ways of seeing, considering, and responding.

At a certain point the students will be asked to elaborate their own personal project related to a particular interest. It can be a theme already considered, or it may come about from what has been presented in the course up to this point. They will carry out this project up to the end of the term. The lesson will cover theory and practice in drawing. Slides, photos, original drawings, and selected readings will complement the course. Photocopied material will be handed out to the students to supplement the principle arguments.

Further details will be given by the professor.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- The aim of this course is to offer the student a foundation in drawing; the possibility of developing certain themes and ideas more in depth.
- Students will further enhance their ability to observe and then transfer and translate this information on to paper in a skillful and personal way.
- The aim is to heighten and strengthen each student's level of observation, interpretation and critical ability so as to utilize this information in an appropriate way towards drawing.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Lessons will cover theory and practice. All works present in class will be supported by lectures accompanied with slides and/or practical demonstrations. In this way, along with the practical aspect of drawing, the students will be encouraged to strive at understanding drawing from a personal and theoretical standpoint. Each lesson has a specific aim and forms part of a progressive build-up of skills and attitudes. Hand-out will be given to the students to support the more important arguments presented.
- Frequent homework exercises are absolutely integrated into the classroom structure and drawing process and will be given throughout the semester.
- Cohesion between the works is important and should always be considered in order to understand what a "body of work" or "portfolio of work" means.
- Every student will present an expose in class an investigation about one specific master drawing

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Each lesson is geared towards the elaboration of specific projects and assignments given in a very structured way. As noted, homework assignments will be given during the course as to further elaborate the classroom exercises: Individual critiques will be given during the course.

Permanent assignments for the whole semester: A diary book with your own sketches of various places, objects, art works and annotations of what is observed is mandatory throughout the entire course.

GRADING AND OTHER POLICIES

Attendance and punctuality are mandatory.

Students are presumed to have sufficient maturity to recognize their responsibility for regular class attendance. Since illness or other good reasons may prevent attendance, Gonzaga University has a standard policy on absences. This policy stipulates that the maximum allowable absence is (2) class hours (100 minutes) for each class credit.

A correct, active and responsible participation is strictly recommended. Homework assignments are an integral part of this course and are therefore mandatory.
