COLLEGIUM GONZAGÆUM: CELEBRATING THE CLASSICS AT GONZAGA

Rare Book Room
February 22 – May 31, 2011

The Rare Book Reading Room in the Foley Center is hosting an exhibit on the history of the classics at Gonzaga. Current classics students and faculty are working with Special Collection staff members to install this exhibit. Photographs, programs, editorials, and even classics textbooks used by Gonzaga students in the early 1900s are included. In addition to tracing the evolution of this department from 1887 - 2011, the exhibit also displays some rare classics books such as Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans (1579) and several noteworthy editions of Virgil. The exhibit coincides with the meeting of the Classical Association of the Pacific Northwest. This conference will be hosted by the Classics Department on March 11 -12, 2011.

CONSTRUCTION IN THE STUDY ROOMS

Four of the study rooms on the west end of the second floor of Foley are getting large, flat screen monitors for students to attach laptops to. These large screens should work great for group study and for watching movies! This project is almost done and the rooms will be available soon.

ARTS & HUMANITIES FROM WEB OF SCIENCE

Last year, the library subscribed to the Sciences and Social Sciences portions of Thomson Reuter's Web of Science database. As of January 1 we have completed access to this database by adding a subscription to the Arts and Humanities section. All parts are searched together, seamlessly, when searching the Web of Science. We have backfile access to records from 1986-2011 in the new addition.

Web of Science is a citation index. It not only indexes and abstracts articles and proceedings, but provides easy access to the citations within an article and indicates how often and where that article has, itself, been cited. In this way you can follow the research both forward and backward, gauge the relevance of an article or author, or peek at how popular your own article has proven to be.
