Degrees: B.A. in International Studies/Asian Studies, B.A. in International Studies/European Studies, B.A. in International Studies/Latin American Studies and B.A. in International Relations

Students who successfully complete a major in International Studies will:

1. Achieve competency above the basic level in at least one modern foreign language; this is measured as the ability to:
   a) Read and converse in that language
   b) Understand and analyze examples of literature and culture related to that modern foreign language

2. Demonstrate an understanding of the major concepts, perspectives, and modes of study which comprise the field of International Studies

3. Explain, analyze, and illustrate the historical development and contemporary issues related to the student’s area of concentration

4. Be able to conduct independent research which involves analyzing and synthesizing information on a single topic related to the students’ chosen fields of emphasis

5. Describe the results of their research in writing and orally in English employing appropriate examples and International Studies concepts