Reach
Gonzaga’s 125th Anniversary in 2012-13 surprised and inspired us. This year-long collection of events originated as an important opportunity to reflect on Gonzaga’s many wonderful traditions and to marvel at its ongoing transformation. And so we honored our Jesuit and Native American Indian roots, as well as the intertwined history and growth of the University and the little hamlet by the river, once known as “Spokane Falls.”

Almost as soon as the year had begun, we honored our heritage with two significant events: the annual Pilgrimage to the Mission of the Sacred Heart at Cataldo, Idaho, and the Historic First Day of Classes – celebrated precisely 125 years to the day that Gonzaga began to educate students. The “Zagapalooza” All-Class Alumni Reunion brought thousands of Zags back to campus in October, honoring the University with their affection and high regard, and giving us a chance to do the same. Throughout the festivities we shared stories of a University that is so clearly on the rise, an institution committed to its faith, its intellectual mission, and the critical work of transforming men and women for leadership and service. Gonzaga has created a national presence that is due to our intentionality and vision, and we continue to build on three core elements: our academic excellence; our emphasis on a community of care, concern, and responsibility; and our network of alumni and friends – encompassing far-reaching resources that nurture our students on their path into today’s complex world.

During this historic year, Gonzaga called upon world-class perspectives for our students – welcoming Archbishop Desmond Tutu as the 2012 Commencement speaker; three-time Pulitzer Prize winner Thomas Friedman; Sir Ken Robinson, renowned futurist and creativity guru; and in April, Jane Goodall, the world-famous primatologist, to round out our Presidential Speaker series.
Midway through the year, as 10,000 Zags celebrated our first National Gonzaga Day, we turned to consider this University’s capacity to establish a strategic future. On National Gonzaga Day, I shared our vision for a new University Center – a portal to the world, a game-changing facility, designed to nurture an integrated education that encompasses learning in and outside the classroom. In a move pointing to our future, the placement of the Center for Global Engagement at the heart of this new Center locates the hub of international education at our very core. In April, the Board of Trustees approved construction, which begins in Fall 2013.

The University recognized in July 2013 the largest single gift in Gonzaga’s history – $25 million – given by longtime friend, supporter and Trustee John Hemmingson. It is a gift we receive with profound gratitude. Such generosity augurs well for Gonzaga’s hope that a spirit of philanthropy will make possible this all-important facility, allowing the University to move forward without further financial encumbrance.

Amid the good news, we recognize that a great deal remains at stake: foremost, an imperative that Gonzaga ascend to a new level of excellence in national and international Jesuit education. Our Catholic foundation supports a community filled with a genuine commitment to advancing knowledge in the service of faith and the culture. At a time when economic disruption and changes in public attitudes have placed many universities under duress, Gonzaga has positioned itself in a stance of opportunity: We continue to attract highly impressive students, both undergraduate and graduate; we continue to explore opportunities for development of new, competitive programs; and we continue to search for and hire brilliant faculty and staff.

As we look to the coming year, we will celebrate the 50th anniversary of Gonzaga-in-Florence. Firenze represents the foundational experience of cultural and spiritual exploration that has transformed more than 6,000 lives. We are deepening our network of international university partners, affording every opportunity to students. Finally, as is fitting today, our faculty is working to imbue international perspectives and sensitivity to global issues across the curriculum.

All of these components allow us to claim a place at the forefront of higher education today, and will continue to enable us to become a beacon to other universities that hope to offer an integrated educational experience. With your help and generosity, we are reaching toward the next level of excellence – and we are grateful. Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam.
Lauren Joplin (‘14), computer science and math major, worked with Assistant Professor Shawn Bowers of Gonzaga’s Department of Computer Science, developing tools to allow scientists to more easily discover and combine large quantities of observational data. Real-world learning, beyond the classroom.
Gonzaga is the only private regional university in the West named to a new operating-efficiency list published by U.S. News & World Report, featuring schools that produce the highest educational quality for a relatively low price per student.

85 students, one award: The KEEN Living and Learning Community in Goller Hall opened in September 2012 with 85 engineering and computer science students in residence. The Kern Foundation gave Gonzaga an Outstanding Award for the program, which offers entrepreneurially-oriented tutoring, speakers and dinners as well as other community-building support.

In May, Gonzaga received $1.2 million from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, its second grant from the biomedical- and science-oriented philanthropy. Four years in duration, the grant strengthens Gonzaga’s sciences. Freshmen learn through conducting their own research; and science majors deepen their understanding by teaching K-6 students.

Engineering students took the top two awards in the September 2012 Innovation Chase Competition in Chicago – and then hosted the next competition in April 2013. The Innovation Chase tests teams on projects involving engineering, entrepreneurship and design.

U.S. News & World Report ranked Gonzaga’s graduate accounting program the 14th best specialty accounting program nationwide. Ninety percent of graduates find employment within six months.
Led by the Guy and Madeline Ossello family, 12 donors came together to create the gracious new Gonzaga Grotto, located between College Hall and St. Al’s Church. Dedication of the Grotto occurred in October 2012, during Gonzaga’s 125th Anniversary all-class reunion.
The 125th Anniversary’s Pilgrimage drew a record 328 students, faculty, staff and friends of the University for the 11-mile walk to the historic Mission of the Sacred Heart at Cataldo, Idaho.

A record-breaking number of students – 2,020 total – participated last year in University Ministry programming, worship and retreats. A new retreat held in February focused solely on men and men’s spirituality.

The Pursuit of Justice Conference in April attracted internationally and nationally recognized speakers. The project emerged from a collaboration between Gonzaga School of Law, the Gonzaga Institute of Hate Studies, and the Washington State Task Force on Race and the Criminal Justice System. The three-day conference marked the 15th anniversary of the Institute for Hate Studies.

Gonzaga was selected to host the international Opus Prize, a leading faith-based, humanitarian award, in October 2014.

Gonzaga’s Center for Teaching and Advising, with visiting scholar Pat Hutchings, launched the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning Initiative, allowing 12 faculty to investigate their own teaching and their students’ learning as research projects.
Planning for one of the most significant buildings in Gonzaga’s history became an integral part of our work in 2012-13. Multiple activities will draw students into the John J. Hemmingson University Center’s four levels and 167,000-plus square feet: Exploring faith at University Ministry, and international conversations in the Center for Global Engagement. Finding services for veterans and non-traditional students. Seeking out the new Terry Payne Center for Experiential Leadership. Serving others through the Center for Community Action and Service-Learning. Building friendships and breaking bread at several dining options. Learning from the building’s sustainable ecology. In short, this globally-oriented portal will create a Gonzaga experience for the 21st century.

Vision:

The Hemmingson will transform delivery of a contemporary, rigorous and relevant Jesuit education. As students discover and take advantage of the offerings found in this campus hub, they will come to understand that these are all elements to incorporate into their life journeys. Gonzaga provides such holistic development for its students.
On average, 1,352 students each day during 2012-13 used resources at the Foley Center Library including databases, e-books, full text periodical articles delivered to your computer or smart phone. Those are just the digital resources. Add 363,213 hard-copy books, DVDs, microfiche, also interactions with librarians and staff through in-person reference queries, online chat or texting – and students enjoy unlimited ways to gather, analyze and present information.

Now, reimagine Foley. Ever-changing technology will afford new possibilities for collaborating on research. While well-written papers will always be important, digital tools will encourage students to express their ideas in videos, web sites and the latest in digital media. This enriched, dynamic environment provides a perfect setting for experiential learning and the discovery of knowledge across disciplinary lines.

Vision:

The Foley Center Library will provide a hybrid collection of the best resources, whether print or electronic, and will offer the space, services and digital tools that enable students to create new scholarship.
“Students must let the gritty reality of this world into their lives.”

Father Kolvenbach, S.J.

Global engagement is a two-way street. As we send our students into the world, we must help them perceive the changes in their own sense of self, just as the institution itself is transformed by ongoing engagement with the world. In the 2012-13 academic year nearly 400 international students came to campus, and over 640 Gonzaga students studied abroad. With over 6,100 alumni, Gonzaga-in-Florence, Gonzaga’s flagship study-abroad program, will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 2013-14.

Vision:

Global engagement connects academic learning and lived experience, building a critical perspective for students to engage people and the world around them in mutually transformative exchanges.
Zambian lecturers Lewis Chulu, left, Peggy Chilema, right, along with 23 colleagues from the Charles Lwanga College of Education spent two weeks this summer on Gonzaga’s campus in a customized master’s program. Completion of this two-year graduate study will give the faculty of this Jesuit institution in Zambia the ability to teach with modern methods and to award four-year degrees. It’s a great example of the kind of faith-based, international, higher-education collaboration at which Gonzaga excels.
At Gonzaga, on average 42.6 percent of each graduating class studies abroad. The national average is just 1.4 percent. GU ranked among the top 15 master’s institutions sending students abroad to study for 2011-12.*

In 2012-13, students chose among 29 study-abroad programs, including faculty-led summer programs as well as semester exchanges and partnerships with top-ranked institutions around the world. Destinations ranged from Italy and Zambia to China, South America and elsewhere. Exchanges, as well as focused recruitment, will bring more international students and scholars to campus.

Vision:

The Center for Global Engagement will deepen our international networks and outreach, while expanding the opportunities for faculty and students to collaborate using technology blended with direct, in-person collaboration to enhance the global competence of students, faculty and administration at Gonzaga.
4,626 undergraduate students received scholarship aid from Gonzaga in 2012-13. Total Gonzaga aid for the year surpassed $73 million. Yet a significant need for greater scholarship funding remains. The need stems from a still-lagging economy, federal and state cuts, and rising costs of higher education. Nearly 20 percent of GU students received Pell grants. Of those, 316 students are from families who can afford no tuition at all.

Vision:

Gonzaga’s endowment totaled $173 million in 2012-13. A growing endowment creates a steadying force. It allows the University to provide more deserving students an exemplary Jesuit education with a vibrant range of experiential learning. That’s a signature piece of the Gonzaga experience.
Economics major Kate Catlin (’13) needed more than $100,000 in scholarship funding. Her accomplishments so far? She became a Rhodes scholar finalist. Two-time U.N. Climate Conference veteran. Member of Venture for America.
The top student in their department? Gonzaga chemistry faculty agreed on one choice: Matthew J. Smith ('13). Next up for this Fulbright and Hertz Fellowship candidate — a doctorate from UC-Berkeley.
The sciences at Gonzaga are taught through inquiry and research. This approach works. The demand in science majors has surged in recent years; our 2012-13 figures show 662 science majors. Step into Hughes Hall any time. Early in the morning or late at night, students not only occupy laboratories, but fill them to capacity. Our short-term need? $1 million to expand lab space.

Vision:

However, the long-term answer to this demand includes building a new interdisciplinary sciences center. Facilities are, of course, just one part of the equation. What makes Gonzaga so distinctive is our commitment to framing education as a transformative life journey. This is of the highest priority in our newly launched School of Nursing and Human Physiology – and all across campus.

Majors in science, technology, engineering and math – the so-called STEM disciplines – along with health science majors in nursing and human physiology, accounted for 47 percent of the incoming undergraduate students in fall 2012.
Ascending to No. 1 on the hardwood. Winning a conference championship on the diamond. Making postseason history on the links and in the water. Gonzaga athletics enjoyed unprecedented success in 2012-13. Now imagine the things our student-athletes could achieve with full financial support. Gonzaga is 48.4 scholarships short of the 149.2 allowed by the NCAA for the Division I sports in which GU participates. Closing this gap will put our athletic programs at a competitive advantage within the West Coast Conference and nationally.

Vision:

The growth and future success of Gonzaga student-athletes, on and off the field of play, depends largely on a firm foundation of endowed scholarships. Investing in this pillar helps our student-athletes become leaders on the field, in the classroom and in life.
Record-breaker. History-maker. First-round draft pick by St. Louis. All-American, on the baseball field and in the classroom. The quintessential Gonzaga student-athlete. This is Marco Gonzales.

HONOR ROLL OF CONTRIBUTORS 2012-13

Your gifts to Gonzaga help our students succeed. You create scholarships. You help the University hire bright, passionate professors. You improve academic programs and you create learning opportunities outside the classroom. Thank you for acting on your passion.

This report of contributors encompasses gifts made between June 1, 2012, and May 31, 2013.

In keeping with Gonzaga’s commitment to sustainability, the entire 2012-13 Honor Roll is displayed online at gonzaga.edu/HonorRoll.

The major meeting space in the new University Center will seat 800 people, opening possibilities of conferences, lectures and performances that attract students, faculty, staff and community members.
Great care was taken to ensure the accuracy of this listing. We would appreciate you alerting us to any errors or omissions. Please contact Laura Gatewood, director of stewardship, at 509.313.6381 or gatewood@gonzaga.edu.

In keeping with Gonzaga’s commitment to sustainability, the entire 2012-13 Honor Roll is displayed online at gonzaga.edu/HonorRoll.

Gonzaga’s 397 international students in 2012-13 spoke at least 12 native languages—Albanian, Arabic, French, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Mandarin Chinese, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, Thai, Turkish and Ukrainian. Many study in Gonzaga’s highly respected English Language Center.
MAJOR BENEFACTORS

LEADERSHIP CIRCLE

ANNUAL CONTRIBUTORS

These benefactors represent a distinguished group of individuals who made a gift of $50,000 or more to the 2013 Annual Campaign (June 1, 2012 – May 31, 2013) making them part of Gonzaga’s Leadership Circle. When members of the Leadership Circle join together in support of Gonzaga, their gifts help to achieve larger goals—preparing men and women who will embrace a global responsibility to ensure justice, protect the dignity of every individual, and serve the greater good.

HERITAGE SOCIETY MEMBERS

The Heritage Society was founded in 1980 to recognize a legacy of giving at Gonzaga and honor alumni and friends who have made a commitment to the University through an estate gift. Estate gifts to Gonzaga are made in many forms, including bequests, gifts of retirement plan assets or life insurance, or charitable gift annuities, remainder unitrusts or lead trusts.
