'Good teaching' at core of Fr. Clancy's goals for Faculty Senate

As Father Tim Clancy, S.J., assumed his role as the Faculty Senate's first president he had one primary focus in mind: revive and maintain good teaching as the hallmark of a Gonzaga education.

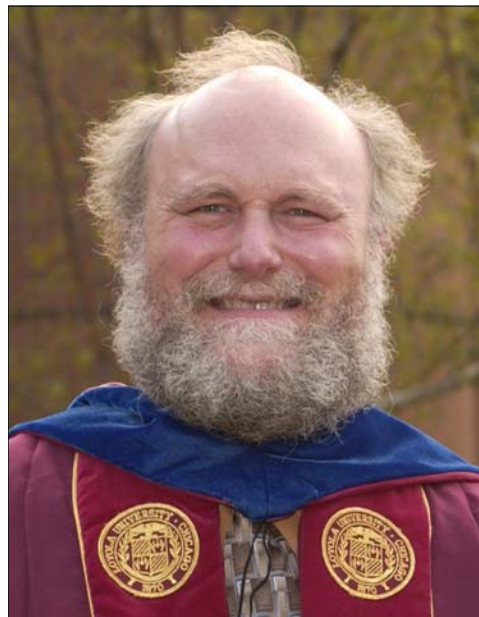

"Good teaching has always been the heart and soul of this university," he told faculty members assembled at the Fall Faculty Conference in August. "The success of our basketball team may get us a first look by prospective students, but it's our reputation for good teaching that brings them through the door, and convinces their parents to shell out the big bucks. And it's our dedication to good teaching that has brought us here."

Fr. Clancy recognizes that there's much more to good teaching than simply what happens in the classroom – from good administrators and housekeepers, to quality librarians and computer specialists. He also pointed out that good teaching is clearly an expensive proposition. He applauds Gonzaga President Father Robert Spitzer, S.J., for helping to "grow" the university out of its financial doldrums which he encountered when he took office in 1998, but "good teaching" has taken a hit by way of larger classes and the addition of too many adjunct and fixed-term faculty, Fr. Clancy said.

"Now it's time to replenish what's been starved and neglected over the past five years – good teaching," Fr. Clancy said.

He outlined three goals for his presidency of the Faculty Senate:

► "My first priority is to continue the good work done this past summer, and to continue to work with the administration and the Board of Trustees to enable us to hire enough faculty to restore the student-teacher ratio and class sizes our students have come to expect from us; to continue to work for creating a pedagogically effective classroom environment across the university; and to bring the university back into compliance with its contractual obligations regarding the use of fixed-term faculty; and to institutionalize a greater faculty voice in administrative decision-making that affects us," Fr. Clancy said.

► "My second priority is to do everything I can to ensure that the new Faculty Senate meets our heady aspirations for it," Fr. Clancy continued. He said the Faculty Senate must truly be representative of the faculty at large in order to fulfill its calling.

► "Finally, my third priority is to raise the priority for good teaching in our fundraising efforts," Fr. Clancy said. He is encouraged by Fr. Spitzer's acknowledgment that "he would like faculty input into all of the long-range planning committees. I will be asking the Senate for how to proceed in selecting faculty for those committees."

"In sum, I believe we have much hard work ahead," Fr. Clancy said. "However, I also believe that the ship is turning and that we are beginning to move in the right direction. After the unprecedented face time we have had with the Board of Trustees this past summer, and given the strong response to our concerns for next year from the board and the president, I am optimistic that we can find a way together to protect, and even enhance, that which has made us who we are – good teaching."

SPIRIT AROUND CAMPUS...

- A team of four 2003 Gonzaga mechanical engineering graduates placed second in the Student Efficiency category of the national Hydro Power Contest held earlier this year in Buffalo, N.Y. Andrew Kalapaca of Edmonds, Wash., Brian Overhauser and Justin Thoren of Spokane, and Craig Shearer of Mead, Wash., designed and fabricated a high-efficiency micro-turbine, and competed with other devices to lift a given weight to a set altitude using water from an overhead tank as the only power source. The engineers were advised by GU mechanical engineering Associate Professor Max Capobianchi.
- A $34,000 grant for travel, equipment, web-site development, training, and field research has been made available by the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID) Leland Initiative to Gonzaga Professor James Beebe to support activities of the Leadership for Development Alliance (LDA) in Southern Africa. The Leland Initiative is designed to increase access of African countries to information on the Internet by making new technologies more accessible, transferable, and manageable. Beebe teaches qualitative research, policy analysis, and technology in the Doctoral Program in Leadership Studies at Gonzaga.
- "The Evolving Symphony Orchestra" is the title for the first panel discussion to be held as a part of the Public Leadership Colloquium. This series is brought to the public by Gonzaga's Organizational Leadership and Continuing Education departments. The event will be held in the Jundt Art Center and Museum from 4-6:30 p.m. on Oct. 8. The night will focus attention on the increasing difficulties and financial struggles of symphony orchestras across the country. This is an issue of growing importance to the Spokane community as the Spokane Symphony Orchestra is preparing to appoint a new director and is searching for funding to restore the Fox Theater as its new home. The panel will include Gonzaga's music chair Robert Spittal.

Patnode receives Arts Commission honor

J. Scott Patnode has spent his working life at Gonzaga, and will be honored Oct. 6 by the Spokane Arts Commission for his many contributions to fine arts in this community.

Patnode's award is for Arts in Education.

After graduating from Gonzaga University in 1968, he returned in 1970 as an art instructor. In 1971, he was appointed director of the Ad Gallery, and was promoted to assistant professor in 1974. He later was promoted to professor.

But his real dream was realized in 1995 when Gonzaga opened the Jundt Art Center and Museum for the whole community to enjoy. Patnode has been its only director and curator.

"That was something he always wanted," said Paul Brekke, assistant curator of the Jundt Art Museum. "He envisioned a beautiful museum for the community. He also has developed a fabulous original print collection going back to the 14th century. In a sense, this is his art form, presenting the great art of the world in a beautiful way. We see the museum as a teaching museum."

A 5 p.m. reception will honor Patnode and the other five Arts Commission Award recipients, followed by the awards presentation at 6 p.m. in City Council Chambers at Spokane City Hall.

Kries, committee to review core curriculum

Associate Professor Doug Kries, philosophy and Catholic studies, has been appointed chair of an ad hoc committee to review the University's core curriculum and determine if any changes are necessary.

The last core review was completed in 1980, Kries said. "The committee's overarching task is not to deal simply with the question of core requirement redistribution but core improvement or enhancement." He expects the process to take between one and three years.

"All faculty will be given the opportunity to submit their ideas and suggestions to the committee and there are no clandestine decisions that have already been made prior to the committee's deliberations," Kries advised. "We will attempt to insure the finest possible core education for Gonzaga's students."

College of Arts and Sciences by the numbers

The College of Arts and Sciences employs 26 staff members, including professionals and administrators. Those 26 people have a combined 313 years of service to Gonzaga. The average tenure is 12 years. The longest standing employee is Fr. Al Morrisette, S.J., associate dean, who has served Gonzaga for 37 years.

Here's a breakdown of the rest of the group by years of service:

Five between 20-25 years
Six between 15-20 years
Two between 10-15 years

Four between 5-10 years
Eight under 5 years

The College also employees 163 regularly contracted faculty, which includes 149 full-time and 14 part-time.

FOCUS on...

LEGENDS: It takes one to know one

Jerry Krause has spent most of his 60-plus years studying the subject for which he has become a prolific writer and noted clinician: basketball.

In fact, Gonzaga's director of basketball operations has written more books on the subject of basketball (24) than any other author on Earth. His most recent publication is "Flex Motion Offense."

But he doesn't stop too long to talk about what's already been done. He has a new series of books in motion. He is writing a series on Hall of Fame coaches, tentatively titled "Lessons from the Legends of the Naismith Coaches Hall of Fame." He's including 79 coaches, from Adolph Rupp to Mike Krzyzewski; from Pat Summit to Jody Conradt. Each profile will include a short bio, a story personifying their character, and a lesson they delivered that set them apart.

"Great coaches have emphasized character," Krause said. "It comes up over and over in my research of these great people. They influenced lives by how they lived theirs."

But he's not stopping there. He already has begun work on a series of books highlighting the great lessons of high school hall of fame basketball coaches. He'd like to do one book for each of the 50 states. He's begun work on Washington, Indiana, Oklahoma and North Carolina.

Krause is a member of the NAIA Hall of Fame, the University of Northern Colorado Hall of Fame, and the National Association of Sports and Physical Education Hall of Fame. He served 17 years as head basketball coach at Eastern Washington University before joining Gonzaga's coaching staff in 1984. He took a few years off to work as a visiting professor at the West Point Academy, but has served Gonzaga for almost 15 years. His employment here is part time.

Murdock million to top off science building

Gonzaga recently was notified that it will receive a $1 million grant from the M.J. Murdock Charitable Trust to help fund renovations to the science building. The grant will help pay for renovations to the existing portion of Hughes Hall, a 42,857-square-foot building constructed in 1962. This summer, work was completed on a new 35,762-square-foot addition to the facility.

Renovations began this summer and will include faculty research laboratories, a biomolecular and two cell biology laboratories, introductory teaching laboratories, classrooms, plus installation of a research greenhouse on the south end, with two adjacent climate-controlled growth chambers. The renovated wing of Hughes Hall will primarily house Gonzaga's biology department, while the new addition has become home to the chemistry department.

Total estimated cost for the expansion and renovation of the science building is $14.7 million. The Murdock award is a "top off" grant, which means Gonzaga must raise the first $2.8 million for the renovation project, after which the Trust will add the $1 million to complete the funding.

Beam-signing event set Oct. 14

Platinum, gold and a few other selected men's basketball season ticket holders in the new McCarthey Arena are invited to autograph one of the 240-ton beams that will support the facility's roof, on Oct. 14, 5 p.m. on the south lawn of the Martin Centre. A dinner will follow.

Arena construction is on schedule, with occupancy expected in October 2004. Later this fall the Athletic Department will notify season ticket holders of their 'point status,' which is the criteria for seat selection within each section of the new arena. Point status is derived from giving history, other contributions to Gonzaga and years as season ticket holders.
